ABSTRACT

This article provides a conceptual framework that outlines the process for establishing job and college goals, assessment, and tracking of students after high school. The American economy demands a more educated and skilled workforce. As educators, we must prepare our students for the future by encouraging them to participate in college preparation activities and learn job skills while still in high school. Students, especially those at risk, can be helped with the transition from high school to the workforce or college by implementing a specifically designed program such as the “Conceptual Framework for Jobs/College Challenge” during their secondary education. It is the hope of the authors that this framework, utilized in high school, will encourage and help students, especially those at risk to enter the workforce or college in larger numbers. They, in turn, will strengthen the economy and thus become a more productive citizen.
